Recommended two sheet arrangements (based on # of kids):

Suggestions:

- Typical party schedule:
 - 15 mins arrival time (spread out brix <10mins before party. Don't let kids spend 2 hrs playing before guests arrive)
 - 30-45 mins free time (depending on age/maturity. Break when they start running around too much)
 - 15 mins cake/snacks (away from brix. IMPORTANT: Wash hands when done!)
 - 30-45 mins free time (don't do gifts after cake. Kids will want to play with new toys!)
- Don't "overplan." Most kids just want to build! Guess the # of bricks in jar is always popular.
- Block sweettart candies are available at many candy stores (e.g. in malls). LEGO® mini-figures make great cake decorations..
- Have kids place loose bricks onto sheet for cleanup, partially scoop some brix into bins, then have dads pick up corners of sheets to funnel back into bins for easy cleanup. Then have dads move bins to dropoff location. Each bin weighs ~40lbs when full.
- No grass. No decks. No food. No drinks. No tables. Floors are the best!
- Warning: when kids see the brix, they will head straight over so plan accordingly.
- Don't put out bricks too soon and allow birthday child play before hand... Sir Brixalot recommends "can't play until first guest arrives!"
